(Solved by Cleaning.suo file and re-run the file) [Diagnosis and treatment of traumatic stress]. Traumatic stress is an important and common post-traumatic symptom. It is a serious consequence of traumatic events and a major cause of disability in the world. From a diagnostic point of view, traumatic stress should be distinguished from other psychiatric disorders, such as depression, and this requires a thorough evaluation. It is also important to assess trauma-related symptoms (especially post-traumatic stress disorder, PTSD) and associated features (e.g. flashbacks, nightmares, irritability, numbing), the latter being more common in PTSD patients. Individual therapy for PTSD patients is based on a careful assessment of the traumatic events and symptoms and on a careful explanation of their meaning. Pharmacological treatment of trauma-related symptoms is mainly based on the use of antidepressants and anti-epileptics, while various psychotherapeutic approaches have been proposed. Although cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT) is the most commonly used therapeutic approach for PTSD patients, other kinds of therapy can also be used. CBT is more effective when given in combination with pharmacological treatment or when it is combined with other psychological approaches. The therapeutic approaches recommended for other PTSD features are limited: ASP.NET MVC 6 - Cannot edit view by controller action I am unable to edit a view by ASP.NET MVC 6 Controller.
